I N T R O D U C T I O N

This list of the sources of current prices was compiled to meet an urgent need in the library of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture. No claim is made for completeness. We hope to add to the number of periodicals indexed as soon as practicable. In spite of the incompleteness of the list, our need for it made us decide not to delay its publication.

In most cases we have used the terminology found in the periodicals themselves. Cities or commodities quoted infrequently have not been mentioned. The items starred are those which do not appear regularly, but do appear with enough frequency to be useful.

It will be noticed that all the journals quoting prices at a given city for a given product are not kept together on the page. For instance, in order to find all the papers quoting New York prices for eggs, one must look at the list of markets quoted in each periodical under eggs. This arrangement has been adopted in order that each periodical might appear but once, and, alphabetically under the name of the commodity. It was thought of greater value to those who will use this list to find all of the cities quoted in one paper together than to find together all of the papers quoting prices for one city.

In most cases, commodities are listed under the general term instead of the specific. For instance fruits, nuts, and spices are given instead of strawberries, pecans, and ginger. This policy has been used because it has been found that in most cases, periodicals do not quote prices on one kind of fruit, spice or nut, but on many kinds of each group. It has been necessary, however, to make a number of exceptions to this general rule. For instance, one paper quotes only lemons. Therefore, in the alphabetical commodity list, lemons are entered as though prices were found in one journal only, with a reference to fruits. Those who use this index should remember that this is not the only periodical which quotes lemons, but that they will probably be quoted in all papers quoting fruits. This general plan has been adopted partly to make the index less bulky and partly because a more detailed list of products cannot be kept accurate, since the lists of fruits or vegetables in any given periodical vary more or less with different issues and different seasons. Every fruit or spice on which prices are quoted will not be quoted in every issue of any paper listed under these products.

Another kind of exception has been made. It has been found that in nearly all of the papers examined potatoes and beans have been quoted in a list, separate from the list of vegetables. This has made it seem desirable to make separate entries for potatoes and beans. The specific instances just noted are merely given as examples of other exceptions that may be found.

Appended is an alphabetical list of notes for the user of this list of sources:

BEANS - There are so many varieties of beans, that it seemed impossible to attempt to differentiate them in this list. All beans have been grouped together. The user will have to examine the periodicals mentioned under beans, in order to find the variety he wants.

BERRIES - Includes not edible fruits, but fish berries, juniper berries, sloe berries, etc.

COTTON SEED PRODUCTS - Includes yellow oil, crude oil, soap stock, cotton seed cake, cotton seed meal, hulls, linters.

FRUITS - Quoted only in season.

GRAIN - Periodicals listed under grain give prices for all of the five grains: wheat, corn, oats, rye and barley. It will always be necessary to look under each of these grains also, in order to find all of the periodicals quoting a given grain. Under wheat, corn, oats, rye, and barley, respectively, will be found periodicals that are not included under the broader term grain.

GROCERIES - This term includes the articles usually found in a grocery store and also package goods, flavoring extracts and other manufactured foods.

VEGETABLES - Quoted in season only.

WOOL - Prices are not of great value, because there is no standard of comparison.

The meanings of the symbols used in the list follow:

- * - Not in every issue.
- o - See list of "Periodicals consulted."
- # - See Introduction.
- 1 - Cash prices.
- 2 - Future prices.
- 3 - Spot and future prices.
